

PIEP National Convention

The 25th PIEP National Convention was held last November 8-10, 2016 at the DusitThani Hotel in Makati City. With the goal of eliciting valuable insights and contributions for a sustainable development agenda, this year's theme is Politics, Policy, and Planning. The time was a significant year that ushered in new Filipino leaders and decision-makers. The new administration now plays a critical role in carrying out policies and plans that impact our ecosystems and communities. It also recognizes that in an ever-changing planning arena, the players that determine national and local actions increase and become more varied. This calls for a deeper understanding of politics, not merely as expressed in electoral exercises, but as a genuine participatory decision-making process at all stages of planning and development.

Arch. Nathaniel von Einsiedel was one of the speakers and discussed on “Planning in the Time of Conflict: Negotiation, Resolution and Consensus Building” during the session of “The Politics of Planning”. It was attended by registered environmental/ urban planners from all over the Philippines, national and local government officials, allied professionals, and partners in the environment, real estate, construction and socio-economic development.

Source: Philippine Institute of Environmental Planners (PIEP)